The contract between the Customer and the Carrier incorporates the provisions the Consignment Note (in the case of Transport services) or the Storage Order (in the case of Storage services) and these conditions. Where there is any inconsistency between the Consignment Note or the Storage Order and these conditions, these conditions prevail. The Carrier does not accept any terms or conditions which the Customer proposes unless these have been agreed in writing by the Carrier.

Where the Customer is not the same person as the Consignor, the Consignor is also bound in the same way as the Customer under these conditions, including in respect of payment of charges. The liability of the Customer and Consignor is joint and several. The Carrier has the same rights against the Consignor as it has against the Customer as set out in these conditions. If for any reason any provision in these conditions is not enforceable against either the Customer or the Consignor the other shall nevertheless remain liable. Acceptance of these conditions by the Consignor is a condition to the Carrier providing services in respect of the Goods.
